

KING STARS BIG AUDIENCE IN EMPIRE TRADE APPEAL

Hail and Wind Beat Down Much Prairie Grain

Violent Storms Cause Losses to Farmers in Strip of Territory From Eastern Districts of Alberta to Brandon Section of Manitoba; Hailstones in Some Areas Described as Large as Pigeon Eggs.

Canadian Press
Winnipeg, July 8.—Hail and winds of cyclonic force which came on the heels of an electrical storm last night and early this morning plied up heavy damage to grain fields in a wide stretch of territory on the prairies. Both telephone and telegraphic services were disrupted and full reports as to the extent of damage were slow in reaching here.

Hail stones, which in some areas were as large as pigeon eggs and standing grain down over a large area stretching all the way from Amisk, Alta., to Brandon, Man., advised said. Thousands of acres of wheat lands were ruined. In a strip of farm country approximately fourteen miles long and six miles wide, located west of Springfield, Sask., the crop loss was estimated as high as 75 to 100 per cent.

WORST IN TWO DECADES

Springwater territory reported the hail storm as the worst experienced in nearly a score of years. Starting early yesterday evening, the hail fell for a brief twenty minutes, but in that time took its heavy toll in the grain fields, completely destroyed practically every garden in Springwater and broke hundreds of windows in dwellings and other buildings. The loss in broken plate-glass alone are estimated at $600.

Previous to the storm, the grain stand in the Springwater area equalled if not surpassed that of two years ago, when more than a half million bushels were produced by the district.

BUILDINGS DAMAGED

Damage to farm buildings was described as "very heavy" in early reports reaching this city from the stricken strip of territory. Late last night the storm struck Brandon, Man., telegraphic services were completely demoralized and Winnipeg was isolated from the west for a time.

From Provost, Alta., word came that the hail late yesterday afternoon struck grain fields on a strip of land nearly fifty miles long and ten miles wide, causing complete crop losses in a few spots, and down to five per cent loss in others.

HEAVY FARM LOSSES

In that Alberta territory the storm came first near the small community of Carleton Place, where an area which is but meagerly sown to wheat and the damage was correspondingly light, but farther east a great part of the land was carrying wheat crops to be a bumper crop and through the districts of Strand, Silver Lake, Sulphur Springs, Heartdown, Ferryhill, Stanseligh, and east, the loss caused by the hard pelting hail ranges from twenty-five per cent upward.

The full force of the cyclonic winds and hail was felt within four miles of Provost, near the eastern border of Alberta. Then the storm swept eastward.

SCENIC TIMBER MUST BE BOUGHT BY GOVERNMENT

Premier Tolmie Privately "Cathedral Grove" Forgets Owned, Pattullo Says

"I notice that Premier Tolmie has announced that the stand of timber on Vancouver Island known as 'Cathedral Grove' is to be preserved for park purposes. The statement coming at this time is doubtless intended to influence public opinion in the present Dominion campaign," F. D. Pattullo, Liberal leader, said to-day.

"In making the statement that the timber in question would be preserved for park purposes, I would like to point out that the timber is not at present in the ownership of the province, but is held privately, and will have to be purchased by the province. No appropriation has been made for the purpose, but apparently, it is the intention of the Provincial Government to ask the Legislature for an appropriation for the purpose.

"I am very much in sympathy with the setting aside of suitable areas for park purposes. Several were set aside during our own tenure of office. Nor am I offering criticism with the setting aside of the area known as 'Cathedral Grove' for park purposes. I am pointing out, however, that the statement as published would lead the public to believe that this is an area already owned by the province, whereas, as a matter of fact, the area will have to be purchased by the province, and the money raised from ordinary taxation.

"I am afraid that the Tolmie administration is heading for a financial morass that will shortly become embarrassing."

ROCKEFELLER GIVES MESSAGE OF GOODWILL

On His Ninety-first Birthday He Tells of Kindness Shown Him

Tarrytown, N.Y., July 8.—John D. Rockefeller to-day celebrated his ninety-first birthday, but the world's general probability took more note of it than did the retired genius of the Standard Oil millions.

Except in slight details, the day's routine was the same as on hundreds of other days since his retirement from active business life twenty years ago.

On his Pocantico Hills estate—so vast that he can take his afternoon automobile ride without ever leaving his own property or being seen by the public—he spent the day.

Miles away in New York, through the offices of the Standard Oil, a statement from Mr. Rockefeller was issued. It read:

"It gives me great pleasure to say I have had more kindness shown me during the past year from every part of the country than ever before in my life, and it is needless to state I am unpeakenly grateful.

"I am in the best of health, surrounded by dear friends, and have naught but goodwill toward all."

In Vancouver Premier King Tells Delegation Government Taking Steps

Canadian Press

McDonald, chairman of the British Columbia lumber delegation to Australia, and J. G. Robson, a member of the party. They asked that the lumber industry be considered in the negotiation of trade treaties, and suggested new markets which might be developed.

Premier King agreed with their plan for the lumber industry, and promised that his government was now keeping and would in future keep this important trade in mind.

AUSTRALIAN LEADER SAYS CHARGE FALSE

Theodore, Speaking in Parliament, Asks Chance to End Mines Accusations

Discussion of Former Queensland Labor Premier's Course Stirs Country

Canadian Press Cable Via Reuters
Canberra, Aus., July 8.—A scene of intense drama was witnessed in the Australian House of Representatives to-day when Hon. E. G. Theodore, who resigned as Federal Treasurer following charges of a royal commission against his former administration of Queensland, made a clear-cut statement in defense of his honor. He demanded the present Queensland Government make a formal charge against him or else in some way enable him to appear before some unimpeachable tribunal to defend himself against "calumnies and doubtful charges."

"I have given half my life to public service. I have maintained exalted ideals and kept my hands clean from anything unworthy of my position of trust," he said.

COUNTRY STIRRED

The present situation has monopolized the attention of all Australia. A royal commission appointed by the present Queensland administration investigated the purchase of the Munghana Mines by the former Theodore State Ministry, and declared there were evidences of fraud and dishonesty. Mr. Theodore, W. M. McCormack, another former Labor State Premier, Peter Goddard, mines manager, and Goddard's associate, Fred Reid, were mentioned in the report. The mines have caused the state of Queensland a loss of at least $5,000,000.

The Labor Party, industrially and politically, is solidly supporting Mr. Theodore.

DEALS WITH UNEMPLOYMENT

The feature of the Premier's speech last night was his statement of the position of the Dominion Government, along with that of the Provincial Governments and municipalities on unemployment. This was made in detail in reply to written questions submitted to him by the Victoria Trades and Labor Council.

CONSTRUCTIVE ACHIEVEMENTS

The constructive work in the building up of a harmonious country the Liberal Government has accomplished in the last ten years in solving for all provinces, irrespective of party differences, their problems of Federal-provincial relations—the railway lands in B.C., lands and natural resources on the prairies, and subsidies in the Maritime—was dealt with by the Premier. He told how these problems had been so dealt with that the provinces were all well satisfied.

CANADA'S GOODWILL MOVE

As to Canada's Imperial trade efforts made through the Dunning budget, the Premier pointed to the enthusiasm of greater empire trade. To-day we are at the meeting of all parts in England and the newspapers.

"The Dunning budget is a gesture to the Mother Country second only to Canada's contribution to the war," the Premier quoted London newspapers comment.

"The people of Britain know that what we have done we have done out of a larger heart, not seeking to bicker and bargain with them as Mr. Bennett proposes," the Premier went on.

THE PREMIER CONTRASTED THIS GESTURE OF GOODWILL WITH THE IDEAS OF MR. BENNETT, DR. MANION AND CONSERVATIVE LEADERS, WHO CONSIDER TRADE EXTENSION AS WAR, AND TALKING OF 'BLASTING' HIS WAY INTO EMPIRE AND BRITISH TRADE. HE ALSO CONTRASTED IT WITH ALL MR. BENNETT'S TALK OF 'CANADA FIRST' AND HIS PROPOSALS OF BRITISH PREFERENCE ONLY BY BARGAINING WITH BRITAIN.

ANSWERS QUESTIONS

Heading in detail with the questions asked by the Victoria Trades and Labor Council, the Premier took the first one, which asked for his attitude towards unemployment insurance. In reply he stated that a committee of Parliament had been constituted to study the unemployment situation and it had called in the law officers of the Crown, the answer the law officers gave was that under the constitution of Canada, certain functions, such as factory inspection and employment felt under the jurisdiction of the provinces.

STEVENS IS ASKED ABOUT NORTH RAILWAY

Farris, Speaking in North Vancouver, Also Discusses Preferential Tariff

Canadian Press
Vancouver, July 8.—Hon. H. H. Stevens was accused of painting only the unimportant side of the picture in respect to Canada's policy on the British preference as laid down in the Dunning budget by J. W. deB. Farris, K.C., prominent Liberal and former Attorney-General of British Columbia, in an address yesterday evening in the Knights of Pythias Hall, North Vancouver.

The expressed purpose of Mr. Farris, who addressed a large audience on behalf of A. E. Munn, Liberal candidate in Vancouver North, was to answer statements made by the Conservative candidate in Vancouver Centre in two recent campaign speeches made in Greater Vancouver.

OLD AGE PENSIONS
Mr. Stevens's explanation of the Old Age Pensions Act conveyed an impression not supported by Hansard, said Mr. Farris. The speaker also scored the Conservative policy of raising the tariff level as a cure-all for Canada's unemployment situation.

Mr. Farris declared he wished to analyze the two speeches of Mr. Stevens because he believed the Vancouver Centre Conservative candidate had not been entirely frank with his constituents.

He was critical of Mr. Stevens's attitude regarding Stewart and a northern railroad. He believed Mr. Stevens was self-conscious regarding that question.

Vancouver had been advised by Mr. Stevens, he stated, not to be sectional on that matter, as whatever helped Northern British Columbia, helped Vancouver.

Mr. Farris was sceptical of such gratuitous advice coming from Vancouver's former member and former cabinet minister. Had it come from the member of parliament from Stewart, he could have understood it.

WILL HEAR MORE
What Vancouver citizens wanted to be sure of Mr. Farris asserted, was that Mr. Stevens was a disinterested witness on that matter. A lot of people were wondering if private interests had not spoken through Mr. Stevens's mouth when he made that statement. Mr. Stevens had promised to speak further on the subject, the speaker continued, but Mr. Farris said he expected Mr. Stevens would hear more on the subject of Stewart and the railroad from the people of Vancouver.

Mr. Stevens had criticized the B.C. Liberal Government to make the Grand Trunk Pacific take over the P.G.E. years ago Mr. Farris stated.

Even yet, he quoted Mr. Stevens as saying: "It was a moral obligation on the part of the Federal Government to take over the P.G.E." and Mr. Stevens added, Mr. Farris said, "that a moral obligation was as binding on a government as a legal obligation."

Then Mr. Farris asked, where Mr. Stevens was during the ensuing four years, after 1918, to enforce that moral obligation on the government, when the Conservatives were in power at Ottawa?

TEST VOTE IN BRITISH HOUSE AT EARLY DATE

London, July 8.—Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, yesterday gave notice of a motion of censure of the MacDonald Government's attitude on the tariff question.

The motion is worded and aims to detach from the government a sufficient number of supporters to bring about the early defeat of the MacDonald administration in the House.

The motion reads in part: "Believing that a return to prosperity may best be promoted by safeguarding the home market against unfair foreign competition and by expanding the export market by reciprocal trade agreements with the Empire overseas, this House regrets that the government has reversed the policy of safeguarding the home market by extending it. This House regrets also that the government has arbitrarily excluded from consideration the imposition of duties on foreign foodstuffs devised to obtain equivalent advantages for British manufacturers and agriculture in the Empire markets and elsewhere."

Among the Conservative Empire free traders, the motion, which will be seconded in the House by Mr. Neville Chamberlain, is hailed as a complete adoption by Mr. Baldwin of Lord Beaverbrook's Empire free trade policy. The Labourites, however, express confidence and argue that the majority of the Liberals in the Commons will vote with the government, although some of them are known to have changed their views recently and to have been converted to protection, as an emergency measure, despite their traditional free trade views.

NEW ZEALAND MOURNS DEATH OF EX-PREMIER

Sir Joseph Ward, Long a Leading Figure in Dominion, Succumbs

Wellington, N.Z., July 8.—New Zealand today mourns the death of Sir Joseph Ward, "The Grand Old Man" of the Dominion, who resigned as Premier only a few weeks ago, at the age of seventy-three, owing to ill-health, died yesterday.

Sir Joseph, leader of the United Party, resigned the premiership on May 15. He had held office since 1912. He was also Prime Minister from 1904 to 1912, and had held many high government positions.

In 1917 and 1918 he was New Zealand representative in the Imperial War Cabinet.

Joseph Bruce Ward was born at Emerald Hill, Melbourne, April 26, 1857, the son of Thomas Ward, a merchant, and was educated privately in Melbourne and in the state school at Bluff, New Zealand. His first employment in New Zealand was as a boy of thirteen, in the department over which he was afterwards to preside as Postmaster-General with conspicuous success for more than twenty years.

At the age of twenty-one he started in business on his own account as a produce merchant and began a connection with municipal politics that lasted many years. He entered Parliament as Liberal member for Awarua in 1887, and retained the seat for more than thirty years. On the formation of the Balance Ministry in 1891 he joined it as Postmaster-General and filled the same office in successive Liberal administrations until 1912, and afterwards for four years in the National Government from 1915 to 1919.

TWO-CENT POSTAGE
In 1901 the success of his efforts to give New Zealand penny postage was rewarded by his being made a K.C.M.G. and at various postal conferences he distinguished himself by his pioneer advocacy of an all-red cable service and universal penny postage. In the Seddon Government he held other important portfolios, which included those of Colonial Treasurer and Minister of Railways, and his appointment as Minister of Public Health in November, 1906, is believed to have been the first such appointment in the world.

NAMED PREMIER IN 1906
After Seddon's death, Sir Joseph Ward, who had on several occasions filled the position of Acting Premier during his leader's absence from New Zealand, succeeded in the premiership, August 6, 1906, and held it till his resignation, March 29, 1912. The subsequent session of 1911 resulted in the return of thirty-seven Liberals, thirty-seven Reform Party members, four Laborites and two Independents. At the subsequent session a motion of no confidence was rejected forty to thirty-nine, but Parliament was prorogued and Sir Joseph resigned the premiership.

After acting as leader of the Opposition till August, 1915, Sir Joseph joined with Mr. W. F. Massey, Reform Party leader, then Prime Minister, in forming the National Government, in which the Reform and Liberal parties were equally represented in order to avoid party strife for the period of the war.

Shortly after his return with Mr. Massey from the Versailles Peace Conference, Sir Joseph dissolved the coalition by resigning his place in the National Government, August, 1919, and at the general election at the end of the year his party was defeated and he himself lost his seat.

RETURNED FROM CANADA
In 1926 the former Liberals and Independent Liberals banded themselves into the new United Party and notified Sir Joseph, who at the time was in Winnipeg, on a Canadian visit, that he was elected leader of the party. Sir Joseph shortly afterward returned to New Zealand to lead the party in the general election campaign of that year. It ended with polling in November, in which the Reform and Liberal parties were equally represented in order to avoid party strife for the period of the war.

Shortly after his return with Mr. Massey from the Versailles Peace Conference, Sir Joseph dissolved the coalition by resigning his place in the National Government, August, 1919, and at the general election at the end of the year his party was defeated and he himself lost his seat.

Three-cornered contests will not be as numerous as early developments indicated. Only five ridings remain where three-cornered battles loom as probable. These are Carleton, Lambton East, Port William, Nipissing and Lanark.

SYDNEY VOTERS HEAR BENNETT STATE VIEWS

Also at Glace Bay, N.S., Federal Conservative Leader Addresses Electors Deals With Iron and Steel and Coal Industries

Canadian Press
Sydney, N.S., July 8.—In the heart of the steel and coal district of the Maritimes, Hon. R. B. Bennett spoke last night. Earlier in the evening he had spoken at Glace Bay.

"Yonder," the Conservative leader said, "is the great steel industry. What has happened in the last eight years? We send a million dollars a day to the United States for iron and steel products. How many tens of thousands of American workmen are living on Canadian money to-day?"

COAL INDUSTRY
Touching on the coal industry, Mr. Bennett said: "What we want to do is to back this industry with all the might and power of the Canadian people." He referred to the appropriation made by parliament at the initiation of the government last session of $10,000 to investigate the possibilities of fuel in Nova Scotia. "Why," the opposition leader said, "$10,000 would not pay the salary of one scientist."

He said he regretted there were such large importations of coal from the United States, amounting to $50,400,000 for one year, coke from the American republic to an annual amount of $6,500,000, and the sending of more than $308,000,000 annually to the same country for iron and steel products. "Do you know," Mr. Bennett proceeded, "how much you lost in this island of Cape Breton according to the best computation because of irregularities in employment in a year? He claimed that since the King government had come into power there was lost through irregularities of employment about $40,000,000."

Mr. Bennett criticized the tariff attitude of the Liberal government since 1921, and criticized the importation of Russian coal and United States coke now being advertised for sale in Canada.

MANION, ON TOUR, SPEAKS IN REVELSTOKE
Revelstoke, B.C., July 8.—Hon. R. J. Manion of Fort William, Ontario, addressed an election campaign meeting here last night, starting a tour of British Columbia in the interest of the Conservative Party.

He denied it was unpatriotic for the Conservative Party to suggest a reciprocal tariff with Great Britain. In the matter of wheat purchases, Britain bought where she could obtain the best price. Why should not any arrangement of the tariff be of equal benefit to both sides? he asked. "A factory is not much importance to Canada as in Manchester or other parts of the Empire, and the best way to be a good Britisher is to be a good Canadian," the speaker said.

OLD AGE PENSIONS
He said the Conservatives had supported old age pensions and had maintained in the House that such a question should come under Federal jurisdiction. He declared that as a result of the present system, some provinces were without old age pensions.

Dr. Manion spoke of ten separate pieces of legislation introduced at various times when the Conservative Party was in power, which, he said, would stand as an answer to the question, "What has the Conservative Party ever done for Labor?" asked by Premier King during the latter's address here last Friday.

TRADE BUILDING AND TRADE BLASTING

WITH A TOTAL DISREGARD FOR the laws of economics, Mr. Bennett says he is going to "blast" a way into foreign markets for Canadian goods, and warring purchases out of foreign buyers, whether they want to make them or not. Last night Premier King showed a Victoria audience what his government has accomplished by a contrary policy, a policy of building up trade according to well-tried and enduring commercial principles. It was a story of business expansion without parallel in history and, as revealed by actual statistics, it abundantly justified the economic policies of the present administration.

As the Premier pointed out, Canada's prosperity is very largely dependent on her foreign trade. If that trade were wiped out, or drastically reduced, this country would be buried under its own surplus wealth, which it could not use and could not sell. Canada's present living standard has been built up on the sale of her products to outside markets on such a scale that she is now, with her relatively small population, the fifth trading nation in the world. The result has not been accomplished by accident. One of the chief reasons for it is to be found in the government's policy of negotiating trade treaties with countries which need our goods and from which we can purchase with advantage. Since Mr. Bennett has continually assailed these treaties, in Parliament and out, their actual workings, in terms of business, are of immediate concern in this election.

The Australian treaty, which Mr. Bennett is never tired of condemning, has almost doubled our exports to Australia in the last seven years. In 1921-1922 we shipped $10,678,000 worth of goods to Australia and imported goods valued at $1,021,000. In 1928-1929, under the treaty, our exports had risen to $19,470,000 and our imports to only $3,454,000. Thus, under a treaty which Mr. Bennett is continually attacking, we export six times as much as we import.

Our exports to New Zealand, under another trade treaty, are even greater. In 1921-1922, before the treaty became operative, we sold $4,128,000 worth of goods to that Dominion and bought $1,783,000 worth from her. In 1928-1929, under the treaty, we sold $17,300,000 worth and imported $12,771,000 worth. For the full calendar year of 1929 our exports to New Zealand had risen to $23,255,000.

In the case of South Africa, another treaty country, trade is overwhelmingly one-sided in our favor. Our exports there in 1921-1922 were only $3,890,000, but had risen by 1928-1929 to $12,231,000. Against that, our imports were $127,000 in 1921-1922, and $280,000 in 1928-1929.

Under the government's treaty with the British West Indies we buy about as much as we sell, which is natural, since those islands sell produce, such as bananas, which we cannot grow ourselves. In 1926, when the treaty came into force, Canada's trade with the West Indies was $30,000,000. At the end of the fiscal year 1928 it was $45,000,000, an increase in two years of $15,000,000.

Thus, to these four treaty nations we exported $30,000,000 in goods in 1921-1922, and $68,000,000 in 1928-1929, an increase of $38,000,000. In the same time our imports grew from $17,000,000 to $37,000,000. The balance could hardly be more in our favor.

With the Oriental nations Canada has no trade treaties, but there also this country's commerce has been growing at an amazing rate under the government's policies. Our exports to China in 1921-1922 were valued at $2,000,000; in 1928-1929, $24,000,000; to Japan in 1921-1922, $14,000,000; in 1928-1929, $42,000,000; to British India in 1921-1922, $1,500,000; in 1928-1929, $12,000,000. Our sales to these three nations alone have expanded from $16,500,000 to $78,000,000 in seven years. At the same time our imports have grown from $14,700,000 to $25,900,000, and are now about a third of our exports.

These are some of the advances in trade which Mr. Bennett would replace with a belligerent programme of "blasting" his way into foreign markets—a programme which, as the United States has already found, inevitably closes any market where it is attempted. Nations now-a-days do not allow their markets to be "blasted" open by other nations but, as the King government has demonstrated, they are willing to trade where trade is mutually advantageous. At this time of world depression, when Canada needs every dollar of her foreign trade, we do not believe Canadians will vote in favor of disrupting it, as Congress is disrupting the foreign trade of the United States. We do not believe Canada will throw overboard the trade treaties and the trade policies which have made it, for its size, the greatest trading nation in the world.

THE CALCUTTA "SWEEP" FIASCO

OLD COUNTRY NEWSPAPERS recently have devoted a great deal of space to what now is known as the latest "sweep" muddle. Two days after the Derby the publication of "lucky numbers" shattered the hopes of certain worthy folk who earlier had been announced as winners. Dreams of fortune evaporated and, as The Daily Mirror puts it, there was a rude end to plans of renovated lives. In an instant, all was vanity and ashes, the disappointed ones being the objects of genuine sympathy.

The daily to which we have referred is rather impatient over the manner in which the Calcutta "sweep" was conducted; but it observed, with some show of admiration for the philosophy of the Anglo-Saxon race, that one of the deluded took his disappointment with commendable stoicism. He is a butcher's assistant, and all he had to say was that he was "of course terribly disappointed," amplifying his comments with the suggestion that "the anxiety of not knowing whether he held a winning ticket or not was worse than knowing that he had nothing to come."

Surely this is bravely spoken. But, as The Daily Mirror points out, if these "sweeps" are to be held, their machinery should be perfect in operation; if not, they should be forbidden altogether.

CONAN DOYLE PASSES ON

DISTINGUISHED PERSONAGES PASS to their last rest and leave us more or less unimpressed. Either we have not come into contact with them, or such works as they may have performed have not affected our lives or thoughts. But the passing of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, stars most of us a good deal; countless thousands the world over felt they almost knew him personally because he created a character that did not seem to belong to fiction at all.

Sherlock Holmes! To us he was the super-detective, the man who out-thought everybody else—even that precious scoundrel Moriarty—whose "elementary, my dear Watson," constantly reminded us of his invincibility in the role to which his creator assigned him. We gradually accustomed ourselves to the belief that he really lived, in the flesh, in that modest dwelling in Baker Street.

Some years have passed since the famous author said farewell to his famous character; but the mythical Mr. Holmes attracts us still, and many years from now his doings will continue to amaze. He will remain our hero of the best detective stories.

Latterly Sir Arthur had applied his talents and most of his thoughts to spiritualism. He believed in it with the sincerity that was so characteristic of his writing. He has now passed to the Great Beyond. We wonder if what in life he believed he had solved is still the mystery it always has been to most of us.

THE STUDY OF PEACE

EVER SINCE ORGANIZED EDUCATION began, the art of war has been one of the leading subjects of study in every country, and in every age. Now at last there is to be a department in Oxford University to promote the study of peace, in accordance with the aims and ideals of the League of Nations. Perhaps it is a melancholy commentary on the progress of civilization that such an experiment should have been delayed so long, or, indeed, that it should be an experiment at all. Anyway, now that it has been undertaken, the friends of peace everywhere—and they are the great mass of mankind—will welcome it and hope that it will prove the beginning of such work on a systematic basis in all the great institutions of learning.

Up to our time periodical war was regarded as an inevitable part of human life. As the damage and slaughter of most wars were usually small, compared with the size of the populations involved, war was looked upon less as an evil than as a logical method of settling arguments between countries. Governments prepared intensively for war, and trained their citizens in it, while peace was allowed, more or less, to look after itself.

This arrangement was tolerable so long as war remained an occasional engagement between a few thousand men, and a great battle was no more destructive than a modern trench raid. It is no longer tolerable when war on a large scale might threaten civilization itself. The disaster which another great war would bring upon humanity has been realized ever since 1914, but only in recent years has the world as a whole realized that if such a disaster is to be averted, definite and constructive work must be done to make peace possible.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

MARKETS FOR THE WEST

This is a serious time for the people of Western Canada. The question to be considered by Western Canadians both in town and country is whether the West is likely to find wide markets for farm products—and these are what provide us with our living—under a policy worked out by a Saskatchewan citizen in the person of Mr. Dunning or by a man of Mr. Bennett's tariff outlook who says that our salvation is in higher tariffs, even on British goods entering this country. This is a matter of dollars and cents to this Western country. It is a matter of bread and butter for the masses of the people. Whose pockets will Mr. Bennett's policy put the money into?

SLAVES TO WOOL

Dr. Eugene L. Flak of the Life Extension Institute of America, lately gave strong support to the theory that the average man who walks the streets of a twentieth century city is "grossly over-clothed." At this time of the year, such a theory goes far to prove itself. Nonetheless Dr. Flak's collection of data is worth looking into. He had an examination made at the institute of the clothing worn by two dozen men and women. It was found that in mild weather the average woman wore about two pounds and a half of clothes, including shoes, and that the shoes of the average man alone weighed as much as that.

Completely clad, the average man wore eight and a half pounds of clothing. On any hot summer day he walked the hot asphalt streets with more than three times the weight of the average woman's raiment on his back. Dr. Flak called for reform, and looked hopefully to England, where last summer some pioneer spirits began a movement to rationalize men's clothing.

CRASH ON THE MARKET

Stocks have fallen because business everywhere has been depressed by overproduction. The world is stocked up, happily not for keeps. There was a saturation point, after all. And, even though recovery be close at hand, it will not assure the high stock prices which the speculative public came to expect as standard, only to be reminded last autumn that the law of supply and demand still works and that no market can digest an unlimited quantity of new securities.

THE COPYRIGHT LAW

The copyright law is becoming emergency legislation. Since 1909 the question of copyright has assumed ever-increasing ramifications and international importance. Forty countries are now members of the International Copyright Union, under whose articles an author's work is copyrighted in one member country is automatically protected in the others. American authors at present lack the protection; they want it and they need it. And authorship is a more significant industry in America to-day than most of us realize.

Loose Ends

The folks from Iowa take their little flag at it but fail to record their experience—these boys are nothing to Elk Lake and need your help—and Mr. Quail stands on guard.

By H. B. W.

THE GREAT and manly outdoor sport of photographing the Parliament buildings is in full swing across the Bay now, and the sight of thousands of happy visitors immortalizing themselves and their friends on the building's steps is rich in mind. It is rather flattering also to know that in thousands of family snap-shots all over the world are pictured the beauty of our city well situated, even if it is only as the background for some lady in khaki riding breeches.

I HAVE OFTEN wondered what irresistible attraction there is for Americans in our Parliament Buildings, why they all seem to derive a strange and secret pleasure from having themselves photographed within the precincts of provincial parliament. Yesterday I questioned a day fellow from Iowa who was endeavoring to include within a single post-card-size snap-shot the War Memorial, the entire Inner Harbor, the Empress Hotel, the Parliament Buildings, and the substantial figure of his wife reclining gracefully against the flag-pole will never be pictured in the family album back in Iowa. This little tragedy is repeated so often here during the summer, indeed, that I am going to ask the government to turn the Parliament Buildings around and face them south, so that the sun will always be behind gentlemen and ladies from Iowa, and they may be sure of a permanent record when they are taking their little flag at it.

THE TIME has come for this column to make its annual appeal on behalf of that tribe of bold and hardy youngsters who want to swim in Elk Lake, but have no way of getting there unless you help them. All along Quadra Street these days, from the middle of the city to Royal Oak, they line the highway, sitting on their little flag, and if you have any warm blood in your veins, you will not disappoint them. So far as I know, this column is their only means of public expression and they should not be penalized for that. If they were organized like grown-up people who are seeking a kind of publicity, their little flag would be thundered at you from the housetops. They would have a press agent who would persuade hard-boiled city editors to publish periodical pleas for a lift to Elk Lake. They would probably get a government grant and hold a tag day to assist all those on their way to Elk Lake. But as they are young and innocent, and have not yet learned the great modern racket of organization, all these boys and girls can do is sit by the roadside and ask you for a lift, for at least as far as you are going.

SOMETIMES it is mighty hard to get to Elk Lake, they tell me, but I have some hope that this column's former appeals were not altogether in vain, for this year, a small boy assured me to-day, it is not so hard as it was a year ago. You can usually get a lift now, he said, and added suggestively that sometimes people even gave him a nickel for an ice cream cone. He got his nickel all right, but when I told him I would quote him in the newspapers he went off thinking that I was just a little crazy but not a bad fellow. Next time you need cheering up, drive out Quadra Street, pick up some small boys, buy them some ice cream cones, and then let them talk. And then thank heaven that civilization in this country has not reached such an ebb that we must pass laws forbidding what is legally condemned and known in some parts of this continent by the vile name of hitchhiking.

AS I HAVE BEEN trudging wearily through this column there has been a most distracting spectacle outside my window, making it very difficult for me to devote to my readers that profound contemplation which is their due. Outside my window Mr. and Mrs. Quail have just introduced their new family to the world. They came out of the oak woods just now, by Mr. Quail, behind him came eight yellow, fluffy children who looked precisely like day-old chicks, but less than half their size. All of them have learned already how to run like their parents and they raced across the open ground at breakneck speed, followed closely by Mrs. Quail, bringing up the rear. They hurried over my garden path and then plunged into the shelter of my perennial border, where they were quickly hidden among the delphiniums. They are not twenty feet away, but I can see no trace of them now, except an occasional stirring of the foliage.

MEANWHILE, Mr. Quail has mounted to the top of my rose pergola and has stood there, a lonely sentinel, for some time.

for the last hour. He cocks his head first one way, then the other, surveying the whole country and guarding his family against any approach of danger, while they gorge on my precious coal, to which they are quite welcome. Mr. Quail knows from long experience that this country is infested by cats who love little quail above everything else. If a cat happened along this way he would flutter down from his perch and drag himself painfully through the grass, away from the perennial border, and the cat, thinking him wounded and an easy prey (for a cat is no sportsman) would follow him. And the fluffy little creatures now hidden by the delphiniums, with luck, might escape the fate which human beings, with the aid of their pets, have prepared for them. Nothing of the sort has happened yet, however, and Mr. Quail seems to be nodding, half asleep, on his perch. And so is this column.

PREMIER MAKES AWARD TO MOST ATTRACTIVE CHILD IN IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Presents $1,500 Cheque to Little John Le Huquet at Royal Theatre

Two Other Victoria Children Receive Awards of Photographers' Association

"I am very glad to be able to present this prize when it is so extraordinarily well merited," said Mr. H. N. Mackenzie King as he handed a cheque to three-year-old John Raymond at the Royal Victoria Theatre yesterday evening and officially crowned him "The Most Attractive Child in America." The Premier made the presentation of the grand prize in the Photographers' Association of America during a lull in the proceedings, and in a few graceful words paid tribute to the little boy and to his parents.

Premier King said that when he had first been told that he was to give a cheque for $1,500 he had been most alarmed, fearing that it was supposed to come from him. He said that cheques of that size were all too rare a sight for him after the expenses of the long campaign, and that he had found it very hard to think of parting with it until he had seen its recipient. He then congratulated the boy and his parents, and also the people of Canada, I know that you will use it to the best advantage, and I only hope that you grow up to be a good Liberal," concluded the Premier amid applause.

A pretty picture was a pretty picture with his curly golden locks falling over his unadorned, intelligent little face. He was accompanied on the platform by his charming mother, Mrs. Joyce Le Huquet, and by Robert Fort, the successful photographer, who was at first mistaken for the little lad's father by the Premier. The mistake was discovered when Mr. Fort introduced the two other prize winners, Shirley I. Brodie and Rodney Charliss Newton. These

CITY WILL BUY OWN BONDS FOR SINKING FUND

Three sets of City of Victoria bonds will be purchased by the City Council for its sinking fund, it was decided at the council meeting yesterday evening following the reading of a recommendation from the finance committee. The first parcel, $2,500 worth of four per cent. City of Victoria bonds, due in 1932 and yielding 5.10 per cent, will be secured from Pemberton & Sons. A similar purchase will be made from the Royal Financial Corporation, while a third parcel of $2,500 worth of five per cent. of Victoria four and one-half per cent. stocks, due February 1, 1932, at 90.50 and accrued interest, yielding 5.10 per cent., will be purchased from A. E. Ames & Company Limited.

or something to do to get away from manual labor. I have yet to have it proved to me that high tariffs give employment. The only thing that I can see it does is to make the half-starved out-of-work practically all starved. I may be wrong, but am always open to correction.

Why the United States is always set up as an example to me I do not know. One has to consider in the case of the Republic that it is an entirely self-contained country, arctic, tropic, and subtropic, and holds a position that no other country on the face of the earth holds, and yet to-day, with its wonderful resources, it has per million population more unemployment than the Old Country.

I have for a number of years introduced myself in quite a few manufactured articles made in England—have, in fact, persuaded not a few factories there to alter their style of goods sent out and have been fairly successful, too, by getting the manufacturers to make what we require, but as everyone knows, England is

TWO PRODUCTIONS
AT ONE TIME KEPT
ALL STARS BUSY

Three players from "Spring is Here," the first National picture now playing at the Capitol Theatre, worked in two pictures at once for about a week. The last scenes of "Spring is Here," were being taken at the same time "The Song of the Flame," an all-technicolor special picture was being started at the First National West Coast Studios. Bernice Claire and Alexander Gray, leads in this picture, were also cast as the leads in "Song of the Flame."

RALPH FORBES IS GERMAN COUNT IN PLAYHOUSE STORY

Ralph Forbes, who plays the role of "Karl von Reider," the handsome young German officer in Tiffany's "Mamba," is probably the first screen hero to wear a monocle throughout his entire performance. This optical adornment has in the past usually been associated with villains or foppish characters, but in the case of Forbes it adds greatly to the distinguished bearing of this popular actor.

COLISEUM FEATURE

Gus Van and Joe Schenck, well-known vaudeville headliners, are making their first all-talking feature picture appearance this week at the Coliseum Theatre in Metro-Goldwyn Mayer's "They Learned About Women." The stars are supported by a large cast headed by Bessie Love and including Mary Doran, J. C. Nugent, Benny Rubin, Tom Dugan, Eddie Gribbon and Francis X. Bushman Jr.

The plot of the picture very much resembles the actual career of the stage pair, who started in as baseball players and ended up as vaudeville headliners.

When Sophie Tucker comes out on to the floor of the great New York night club in "Honky Tonk," the latest Warner Bros. talking, singing, Vitaphone production now showing at the Columbia Theatre and sings her torrid ditties, she doesn't need to act.

She can be perfectly natural, for she has filled this self-same role in real life on countless nights. Many years of her life have been spent as an entertainer in night clubs, mimics of ceremonies, singer of songs, and general life-of-the-party.

CANDIDATES AT
KING POLICIES

Stuart Henderson and C. H. O'Halloran Precede Premier
With Short Addresses

Lower Island Candidates Play
Tory Tariff Policies

"On the one side you have a policy which will throttle the life-blood of Canada. On the other you have the Dunning budget—sane, moderate and determined; secure to meet the exigencies of the situation," stated Stuart Henderson, Liberal candidate for Victoria, in his speech yesterday evening at the Royal Victoria Theatre. Mr. Henderson followed C. H. O'Halloran, the Nanaimo candidate, on the platform and breathed a stirring message to the thousands of his constituents who packed the theatre and listened on the air.

Both the Liberal candidates for the lower island spoke briefly before the speech of the Premier.

Mr. Henderson after being introduced by William Kinsman, president of the Victoria Liberal Association, began by saying that he expected to be elected because sixty per cent of the Victoria electorate were women. He felt that he should receive every feminine vote in Victoria because of the wonderful legislation which the King administration had put through for the women of Canada, particularly the mothers' and orphan's pensions act.

Blending wit with gravity, he went on to relate his answer to a Victorian friend who had asked him "What is the difference between a Liberal and a Conservative government?"

"I feel I can do no better than give my reply word for word," continued Mr. Henderson. "I told him that a Liberal government legislates for the people and leaves the privileged class to fend for itself, while a Tory government legislates for the privileged class and further allows them to rule the mass of the people. Mr. Bennett speaks for the manufacturer and not for the people of Canada. The Conservative tariff policy has been framed expressly for the privileged class."

He went on to commend the attitude of the King government towards the United States. "We are glad to meet and trade with our great neighbors to the south of us," he stated.

After speaking in glowing terms of the government's financial policy he concluded with a biting reference to Tory promises by suggesting that Mr. Bennett's friends in Victoria should have followed the lead of their associates in the Maritimes by asking him for a free port on the Pacific before he got too far away.

W. H. Kinsman introduced C. H. O'Halloran as "the Liberal member-elect for Saanich who is waging such a courageous, aggressive fight in every part of his riding." Mr. O'Halloran contented himself with a few words of welcome to the Premier on behalf of the electors of the Nanaimo riding.

GARBAGE BY-LAW
EARNS COUNCIL
CENSURE VOTE

Big Saanich Meeting Denounces Voting Arrangements For Saturday

Ward Seven Audience Proclaims Belief Council Not Straightforward

A unanimous vote of censure on the Saanich council yesterday evening proved the climax of a noisy meeting of nearly 100 Ward Seven Saanich ratepayers, held at Tillicum School at the call of the Municipal Council, for discussion of the proposed garbage collection by-law, to be voted on next Saturday.

The vote of censure was ostensibly directed towards the lack of provision of a polling booth in Ward Seven, but the tenor of opinion was constantly repeated when speakers protested that, despite themselves, residents in Ward Seven would be dragged into a garbage collection service by Ward Two.

This subsequent of opinion became so obvious that Councillor Crowhurst of Ward Two, and chairman of the garbage committee, inquired: "Do you seriously think that we of the municipal council tried to put something over on Ward Seven?" and was rewarded with the reply "We do," the response being repeated until it became almost a chorus.

The chair was taken by William Tomes, after H. Campton, president of the Ward Seven Ratepayers Association had protested against Councillor Crowhurst officiating. Councillor Stanley Eden explained the proposed garbage collection scheme would be operated on a basis of collection at ten days intervals. The cost would be about $4,500 annually, and would work out at about $4 per residence.

The councillor later informed Mr. Campton that the proposal to collect the garbage levy on fifty per cent of the assessed worth of improvements had not been influenced by the efforts of rural wards to impose the general tax levy on a greater percentage of improvement values than the fifteen per cent at present taxed.

Ex-Councillor E. D. Murphy protested against the lack of a polling booth in the ward and many persons demanded how the opinion of the residents could be ascertained from the Ward Two vote. Councillor Crowhurst explained that the special area ignored ward lines, and the location of the poll at Tolmie School was equally central to both Ward Two and Ward Seven.

The vote of censure on the council, moved by J. Bryant and seconded by W. J. Waters, was supported by forty-four votes, on the count of the chairman, but was declared unanimous when no hand was raised in opposition.

YOUR BABY and MINE

Mrs. M. E. says: "My procedure is contrary to the usual ones, but it has given satisfactory results. My daughter has stammered since about two years of age. I was advised to ignore it, but I felt that the habit was becoming fixed by repetition."

STAMMERING HAS NO ONE CURE

Stammering is the sort of nervous affliction which has so many causes and is influenced by such seemingly small things that the experiences of mothers with stammering children are of enormous importance and interest to others. The following letters offer no particular panacea, for there is none, but they do suggest methods which might be tried out if a child is developing into a stammerer. We offer a leaflet on the subject of stammering, covering the common causes and suggesting some helpful books. Any reader may obtain this leaflet for a self-addressed, stamped envelope enclosed with her request.

NEW WORDS CAUSE DIFFICULTY

Mrs. G. W. B. writes: "My son aged four and one-half has twice gone through the stammering stage. One book on psychology (I am sorry you didn't mention which one, Mrs. G. W. B.) suggests that this may be caused by the child's need for a more extensive vocabulary. I found this to be true in my son's case. When he started to stammer I tried to calm him and told him to take his time. In a short time a few new words blossomed out. I have noticed this in other children."

"I am past fifty," writes Mrs. M. E. W., "but I always read your department, for I hope some day to have grandchildren. I noticed that my children stammered after they had been tickled by anyone. This went on until I was certain of it and then I put an end to tickling. It may be enjoyable to an adult to see a child double up with laughter, but it is certainly hard on the child's nervous system."

Mrs. M. E. says: "My procedure is contrary to the usual ones, but it has given satisfactory results. My daughter has stammered since about two years of age. I was advised to ignore it, but I felt that the habit was becoming fixed by repetition."

"As a last resort I began reminding her gently not to repeat words and to talk like mother. I was emphatic in praising her for the way she gave for her dolls, puts her playthings away, and recites poems. Now the defect is scarcely noticeable. She takes this suggestion exactly as she takes all other suggestions, and she goes for hours without stammering. I guard against over-fatigue to keep her better-tempered and more cooperative. My method may not be scientific but it is working."

CONVINCE INDIVIDUAL CASES

It is always reasonable to use a method that is successful with the individual child. Science can do no more than suggest the ways beneficial to the most children. On the heels of these letters came another from the aunt of a boy of seventeen who was very bright, had an excellent vocabulary and was now stammering temporarily. Hitching this to the first letter we see a connection, for this boy may want to use more words at the moment than come quickly to mind and in his effort to use exactly the right word he has to stop and think, causing him to lag in his speech. Perhaps less effort to use unfamiliar words, adding to his vocabulary only a few new ones at a time may end his difficulty. Any way of living which contributes to the child's general good health and calm should also bring about an improvement in perky speech.

H. J. GEAKE, R.N., DIED IN ENGLAND

According to word received in Victoria yesterday, the death of Harry James Geake, R.N., occurred in West-cliff-on-Sea, Essex, England, on June 16, aged eighty years. The late Mr. Geake was a resident of Esquimalt for many years.

Previous to his assignment at the Esquimalt Naval Station, he was in China, during which time he saw active service in the Chinese War, receiving the Persia Medal. He also took an active part in the Egyptian campaign in 1882, receiving the Egyptian Star and the Alexandria Medal. He arrived at the Esquimalt naval base in 1888 and was closely associated with the naval yard throughout its growth. During the latter part of its activity and until closing in 1905, Mr. Geake had charge of the torpedo boats attached to the yard station.

Following his retirement from the navy he followed his profession of civil engineering on this Coast, eventually settling in England.

At the beginning of the Great War, he was called up and stationed at Harland & Wolff's, Belfast, Ireland, where he was engaged in testing engines and submarines. Later his work took him as far afield as the Baltic Sea and the Dardanelles. In addition to other medals, he held the Long Service Medal and received the two medals of the Great War.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The summer brings its usual problems. Welfare societies and baby-making places where little girls may take their baby brothers or sisters on summer days. These places provide care for the babies in the form of day nurseries and playgrounds so that the little mothers may enjoy themselves also.

There are many families where mothers must be away all day earning, in which the oldest little girl must take the place of the parent. In certain districts of large cities we see these "little mothers" by the hundreds caring for the family babies. They carry them around, often the baby almost as big as themselves, and never know a free moment away from their charges.

The little mother is not always the daughter of the wage-earning mother. Perhaps she is commoner in just the average everyday home where mothers are busy with household work.

While she irons or washes or cooks or cleans, the daughter of the house will be wheeling her baby brother out for his airing, watching him while he plays on the porch, directing his four-wheeled car, babbling him, feeding him, and dressing him. And that is all right as far as it goes. There is no reason why older girls should not help share the responsibility and work. But I have known mothers who never thought fit to relieve their little girls from the responsibility of the baby from one summer's end to the other. They forgot that the older children had as much right to their play and freedom as the younger ones. "Go look after the baby." "No, you can't go to movie. We'll have the baby?" "Wheel the baby while I bake the pie for supper."

It's all very well for a certain part of each day, but it isn't fair to coddle a child with the constant care of an infant unless it is absolutely unavoidable. She will learn to hate the baby and all babies, very likely, if she is turned into a drudge on his account.

A CASE IN POINT

I knew a mother once who sewed all summer long while her two little girls were veritable prisoners. Once they left their little sister on a neighbor's porch and ran after a hurdy-hurdy with known mothers who never dreamed. The baby fell off the porch and was hurt, and the girls were punished soundly.

Those girls grew up with the sourest dispositions imaginable and they were sworn enemies of that sister.

There is the other thing, too, about children taking care of babies. They may hurt their backs or bend their soft bones out of shape by carrying a heavy child. Whenever I see a woman with round crooked shoulders, particularly with the right lower than the left, I say to myself, "She has probably helped bring up her mother's family when she was a child." It is childhood experiences that bend our bones.

And how about the baby himself? Is he safe always with his ten-year-old sister? Isn't she likely to let him fall? Besides, children cannot be expected to stick to a task at this age for long without their attention flagging. In a house with endless work to be done, I should say to reverse the order of things. A little girl of ten can learn many household duties and relieve her mother in that way. It seems a much safer plan for everybody, and it is certainly kinder to her.

Vacation should be as much of a vacation as possible. Children must play.

ENGLISH FAIR PLANNED

The Native Daughters of British Columbia plan to have an old English fair on Saturday, August 2. The fair will take place in one of the oldest gardens in British Columbia, those of the late Hon. J. S. Helmcken. The stallholders will be in the costume of the times, and the dances will also be of the same period.

WON BEAUTY TITLE BY DEFAULT

It was not in the eyes of the judges, but in the light of subsequent developments that Miss Margaret Ekdol, pictured here, was chosen the new "Miss America" and winner of the International Beauty Pageant at Miami, Fla. Margaret was given only third honors when the original decisions were made, but she captured the title through the disqualification of the first and second prize winners. The eighteen-year-old blonde from Tampa, however, still has a claim to being the "fairest of the fair," for her more comely competitors had been unfair in declaring their marital and residential status.

BLACK EYE MUST TURN WHITE ERE DANCERS DO HOP

Duncan Sisters Cannot Perform Together For While; Love Was Too Rough

Los Angeles, July 6.—Temporarily, at least, the team of the Duncan sisters, experts of the light fantastic, will do no dancing publicly. The length of the enforced retirement depends on how long it takes a black eye to turn white.

One-half of the team—Vivian—became the casualty shortly after midnight yesterday at fashionable Malibu Beach, favorite summer resort of the Hollywood film colony when she alleged several hours later a young actor, Rex Lease, delivered a punch to her eye.

The eye was not the total extent of injuries, but it was the most important. She claimed black and blue marks and a bruised knee, blame for which she laid to Lease's feet.

While the principals remained incommunicado afterwards, as much as could be made out from accounts by Justice of Peace John L. Webster of Malibu Beach, before whom Miss Duncan brought Lease on a charge of battery, the dancer suffered injuries when she reproved Lease for his advances.

Lease was freed under $500 bail and ordered to face a hearing Thursday.

A STRONG LOVER

Miss Duncan told the justice she left the home of Charles Farrell, film actor, following an informal gathering there with Lease and John Farrow, scenario writer. She drove to her cottage, Farrow had goodnight at his home, the dancer said, and as he disappeared Lease took the keys from her car. She said she demanded return of the keys. Lease refused and asked for a kiss. She became indignant and Lease swung at her eye. The punch landed, followed by several kicks and when she asked him the reason of the outburst, she said he replied:

ST. AUBELIE, P.Q.—"Was nervous, exhausted. So skinny, was embarrassed," says Miss Alphonsine Fortier, teacher. "Tried Ironized Yeast. Gained 14 lbs. in 3 weeks. Now healthy and happy."

Teachers, lawyers, doctors, nurses, mothers, ministers all write of gains of 5 to 15 lbs. in 3 weeks with new Ironized Yeast. Blemished skin clears. "Nervous," constipation, indigestion go overnight. New pep first day.

Ironized Yeast is two great tonics in one. Weight-building brewer's Yeast plus strengthening, blood-enriching iron. Many times more effective than unmedicated yeast. Results in half the time.

"Because I love you."

The dancer summoned a night watchman, who arrested Lease and the justice opened court a few hours early.

Lucky?

"My sister was lucky the other day. She was at a party where they played a game where the men had to kiss the girls or buy them a box of chocolates."

"How was your sister lucky?"

"She came home with fourteen boxes of chocolates."

How Many Calories? It Depends Chiefly on the Work You Do

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Again and again in these articles the energy values of various foods have been mentioned. The coming of exact knowledge regarding the importance of the vitamins and the mineral salts in food has taken interest away from the calories, but the fact remains that the calories are the one measure of value of energy.

A child one year old requires almost 1,000 calories a day; nine years of age, 2,000; thirteen years of age, 3,000; and sixteen years of age, 4,000. The average adult requires anywhere from 2,400 to 4,000 calories per day, depending on the kind of work he may be doing.

There are innumerable books available which tell the important facts regarding the amount of calories provided by various food substances, but few people seem to be able to carry these figures in mind.

The best way to remember calory values is to associate them with some portion of common food; thus, one slice of bread one-half inch thick and about six inches by three inches provides 100 calories. The same amount is supplied by an ounce of oatmeal; one large egg; one-third of a pint of milk; a large apple, banana, or orange; two dozen peanuts or raisins; two ounces of beefsteak; six cubes of sugar or one shredded wheat biscuit.

Thus it is possible to eat a considerable amount of food without over-eating, and only by eating an amount of food sufficient to take care of the ordinary wear and tear of the body can good health be continued.

Some industries demand many more calories than do others. A brain worker uses about 2,000 calories a day, since he does not do any muscular work. If he has to travel around, he increases his number to 2,300 or 2,500.

A tailor or box maker uses an additional 300 to 500 calories; a metal worker, carpenter or painter uses an additional 800 to 1,000; a stone mason or lumberman uses an additional 2,400 to 3,000 calories; a lady of leisure uses about the same number of calories per day as a brain worker, although her brain may never think a thought; a seamstress uses fifty more calories per day; a typist 200 more; a housemaid 700 more, and a laundress 1,600 more calories per day.

Washington In Senators Hurdle Idle A's By Win Over Boston Sox

Walter Johnson's Club Gains Leadership of American League by Half-game Margin Over World Champions; Crowder Wins Fifth Straight Game for Washington; Herman Stars as Brooklyn Beats Boston to Gain Full Game on Chicago; Giants Win Slugging Match.

Aided by the schedule makers Washington Senators are to-day out in front in the hectic American League pennant scramble for the second time this season.

Because the playing dates gave the Philadelphia Athletics a day of rest yesterday and let the Senators play the Red Sox, Washington is leading the champions by one-half game as the result of an 8 to 1 triumph over Boston.

Alvin Crowder, St. Louis Browns' cast off, set the Sox down with eight scalped hits and did not issue a base on balls to win his fifth straight game since joining the Senators.

The badly crippled Cleveland Indians dropped a few more points off their percentage column, when they fell before the St. Louis Browns 6-1. The victors benefited on circuit drives by Ralph Green and Goose Goslin.

A standoff was the result of the Detroit-Chicago doubleheader, the Tigers taking the first 3-2 behind the good pitching of Earl Whitehill, but losing the second 9-8.

ROBINS GO AHEAD

Babe Herman's powerful bat gave Brooklyn Robins a full game advantage over the Cubs as the National League champions lost while the pace setters were trimming the Boston Braves 2-1.

The Cubs looked just like another half club as they dropped their third straight to the floundering Cincinnati Reds. The score was 4-2.

A modern game of baseball was played at Philadelphia, where the New York Giants defeated the Phillies 13-12 in a slugging orgy that brought five New York and three Philadelphia pitchers to the mound.

The St. Louis Cardinals march up the standing was halted by the Pittsburgh Pirates, who won 5-3 behind the steady pitching of Larry French.

Boston, July 7.—Alvin Crowder pitched the Washington Senators back into the American League leadership with an 8 to 1 triumph over the Boston Red Sox, while the Athletics were idle. It was the eighth consecutive victory for the Senators and Crowder's fifth since joining the club.

The former St. Louis hurler set the Sox down with eight scattered hits, struck out three, and did not issue a base on balls. His teammates clubbed big Ed.

The National League half of baseball's Big Six had things all their way Monday, but only Frank O'Doul managed to improve his average. The Phillies left fielder was at bat four times and pounded out two hits, one a home run to boost his batting to .400. Although Klein hit his twenty-fourth home run he lost a point when he got only two hits in six times at bat. Paul Waner went hitless, while Ruth, Gehrig and Simmons were idle.

Max Schmeling

When Kaiser Wilhelm was training for the heavyweight championship of the military world, Max Schmeling was a young man, a soldier, a fighter, a champion. He was a German housewife, tall and strong, accustomed to the heavy toil of German country life. She lives in Berlin now, a fine apartment which her husband has provided with the fruits of his success. Mother-like, she adored her son, and his winning of the championship was no surprise to her. She felt sure he would win "because Maxie told me he would." The father was a huge man, strong and fearless, known throughout the country community as unusually alert and intelligent.

Max Schmeling

When Max was still a mere baby, the family moved to Hamburg, a bustling seaport on the Elbe, a modern town, much like Boston or New York. The elder Max, against the wishes of his family, went to sea. He became a seaman for the Hamburg-American line.

Max Schmeling

The boy Max grew big, strong, courageous and swift of foot. He entered the oldest free school of Hamburg, a city proud even to-day of the excellence of its free schools.

Max Schmeling

He wrestled and fought with the other kids, learned to swim, and played soccer, which occupies a position in German sport corresponding to football in America. He was good at "turning" or gymnastics. In his trim military cap and sailor's blouse, Max toted his knapsack of books to school daily.

SOFTBALL

The second-half race in the West-holme Softball League is still as tight as the proverbial drum to-day after the three leading teams had registered victories yesterday evening. Moore's Whittington and Jokers remain in tie for the lead with wins over the Colonist and Colwood respectively. While the Times nine kept close on their heels with a 15-11 victory over the Y.M.C.A.

As things stand now both Moore's Whittington and the Jokers must lose on Thursday to give the Times a chance to go into the play-offs. If both the leaders win they will meet in a sudden death replay for the second tie championship.

Moore's Whittington had a decided margin over the morning journalists in a slugfest which ended with the lumbermen on the long end of a 17-10 score. Jokers' first half champions, turned in an impressive display in downing Colwood Logging Co. 25-4 in the most one-sided game of the day.

TACKLE GIVES GUS FALL AND DRAW WITHED.

Sonnenberg After Losing First Fall to Lewis, Flies Through Air to Square Matters

Champion Goes Into Laps of Fans When He Misses Lewis; 10,000 Attend

Seattle, July 8.—Thanks to his flying tackle Gus Sonnenberg is still the popularly recognized world's heavyweight wrestling champion.

In his sixth match with Ed. "Strangler" Lewis, former titleholder, Sonnenberg wrestled to a draw out-does here yesterday evening before 10,000 fans who paid nearly $22,000 to witness the bout.

Lewis scored the first fall with his famous headlock in the fourth round, but he lost his advantage when the former titleholder was in top of Gus applying a headlock as the final gong sounded at midnight.

John Freberg, Chicago heavyweight, scored a one-fall decision over Hans Bauer, Germany, in the semi-final. Freberg downed Bauer with a body slam in the fourth round.

Abe Coleman, New York heavyweight, with a body slam in the fourth, and Bob Myer, Portland light-heavyweight, defeated Des Anderson, Eugene, Ore., with a body slam in the third.

GUS GOES THROUGH ROPES

In the eighth and final round Sonnenberg attempted several tackles and once landed on the laps of several fans in the second row when Lewis sidestepped a head-on charge.

The former titleholder was in top of Gus applying a headlock as the final gong sounded at midnight.

John Freberg, Chicago heavyweight, scored a one-fall decision over Hans Bauer, Germany, in the semi-final. Freberg downed Bauer with a body slam in the fourth round.

Word to this effect was received by T. F. McConnell, chairman of the sports committee of the Rotary Club, under whose auspices the gala will be staged, in a wire from May Daughters, Seattle, coach to-day.

DIFFICULTY IN SHIFTING WEIGHT

One of the great troubles which the new expert player experiences is an inability to shift his weight properly. A great many start with most of their weight upon the left leg, a position from which a proper use of the body is impossible. Another mistake often made is addressing the ball too far back off the left foot, the player's weight in front of the ball in such relation to it that the power of his body cannot be exerted behind the stroke. It is my suggestion that both of these difficulties can be aided by approaching the ball in the proper way.

The close observer will note that almost all of the first class players take their stances in substantially the same way. They walk up to the ball always from behind it or from the left side in the case of a right-hand player. One look at the objective, and the club is placed behind the ball, on player at this time standing—some what behind the line of the ball; then the left foot swings forward into position and the body settles naturally in the place. After this it is rarely necessary to move the right foot.

THE BEST WAY

This procedure accomplishes several things. First, it fixes the distance from the feet to the ball in the best of all ways by accommodating the distance to the player's own arms and club. Personally, I cannot imagine taking my stance without first having some measure of this distance. The second advantage is that the player has approached the ball in the normal relaxed posture of ordinary walking. Approaching the ball from behind the player steps in a place where his body will be behind the spot and he sets himself naturally with his weight properly distributed. After all this, if he insists upon throwing his weight upon the left leg he must be considered hopeless.

It is hard to appreciate that anything apparently so unimportant should be of any aid in actually striking a golf ball. Most of the better players have observed the practice so long that they scarcely ever think of it. But just the same, one of this class will hardly ever be seen to approach any shot from the forward side, or to step over the ball into position.

APARTMENT RE-ZONING CONSIDERED

Building of Attractive Structures in Single Family Districts Discussed

Specifications Would Prevent Apartments From "Crowding" Other Houses

Proposed amendments of the city zoning by-law, particularly those clauses prohibiting the erection of apartment houses in residential districts, were discussed at some length by the city council at its meeting yesterday evening and left over for further consideration in two weeks' time.

Regarding the city's action in the case of an apartment building now standing in a prohibited area, being burned down, Alderman Wm. Strath pointed out that should such an incident occur, the zoning by-law forbade the owner to replace it. Consequently, if the building were mortgaged, he added, the mortgagee would be left without security.

Certain specifications, permitting the erection of apartments in restricted areas were also brought forward by Alderman Strath. He pointed out the fact that if apartments of sufficient attractiveness were located in certain localities in which they were prohibited, such might possibly be built in accordance with an amendment suggested to the act. In such a case, he continued, a structure might be erected a specified distance away from the road with enough ground on each side to prevent the building from cutting the light away from adjacent houses.

MUST BE ATTRACTIVE

While personally non-committal on the proposition, he illustrated to the council the feasibility of such a system. However, he noted, the apartments would have to have an appearance that would in no way detract from the value of surrounding property.

Such regulations required in residential areas, would not, however, apply to districts set aside for that particular type of structure, he added.

It was also suggested that the corner of Yates and Fort Streets be zoned for garages. The council voiced its opinion against the construction of a store and apartment on the north-west corner of Yates and South Turner Streets, but tabled the matter with the other consideration.

BROWN ON FUNERAL PARLOR

The advisability of permitting the construction of an undertaking establishment in the district around Quadra and North Park Streets was also questioned during the meeting. In the present plan, the zoning by-law would permit this, it was noted.

In conclusion the zoning of the area, on Yates and Fort Streets, between regulations and as a commercial area was suggested.

All proposed amendments were laid on the table for further consideration.

AMY JOHNSON TEACHES LESSON TO YOUNG MAN

Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's Perth, Western Australia, July 8.—One young man in Perth, who knows Amy Johnson, the English girl who recently made a brilliant airplane flight alone from England to Australia, learned yesterday she can only be kissed at her own sweet will.

There were wild scenes in the streets when the smiling girl flew arrived on a tour of Australian cities. Her auto was mobbed by admirers.

One enthusiastic young man attempted to kiss Miss Johnson, but she slapped his face and he retired crestfallen, to nurse a bleeding nose.

POTATO MEN TO OBSERVE MARKET ACT

B.C. Minister of Agriculture Advises Growers Law Still Governs Selling

Potato growers of the Lower Mainland were reminded officially by Hon. William Atkinson, Minister of Agriculture, yesterday that their produce was still under the operations of the Produce Marketing Act and must be marketed accordingly.

Mr. Atkinson's statement on the subject was issued after he had heard many growers were confused as a result of the controversy over the marketing situation and believed they had been removed from the scope of the act. The Minister pointed out that after various preliminary steps, including a vote of growers in favor of control, the interior committee of direction had recently appointed R. B. Homershay, who formerly represented it in Kamloops, as its representative on the lower mainland. He would administer the potato industry for the interior committee, and his instructions regarding prices and marketing must be observed, Mr. Atkinson emphasized.

He pointed out the government had had nothing to do with the establishment of control and was not interfering in any way with its enforcement, but he felt the real situation should be made clear to the growers at this time.

SAN FRANCISCO GIVES FLIERS WARM WELCOME

Kingsford-Smith and Companions Greeted By Mayor and Old Friends

San Francisco, July 8.—San Franciscans were reminded officially by Hon. Charles Kingsford-Smith, world flier, in a patchwork plane flew from the Oakland airport to receive a rousing reception from old friends.

Two Australian and two Canadian, Captain J. P. Gail and J. W. Swan, stepped from the famed monoplane Southern Cross at Mills Field to be hurried to the Embarcadero, where a parade was formed.

With sirens screaming, a long line of automobiles moved up Market Street to the City Hall, where the Irish-American fliers were officially greeted by Mayor James Rolph, county supervisors and aviators who "knew him when he was wandering where an angel for the Pacific flight could be found."

The three fliers, after the formal reception in the mayor's office, were guests of informal receptions. A formal banquet last night ended the welcoming ceremonies.

The trio will depart within a few days for their home. The Southern Cross owner will return to Australia and marry Mary Powell of Melbourne. Stannage will return to England, and Saul to his real estate interests in Ireland.

POPULATION GAIN HITTING ITALY

Farm Output Now Seen as Insufficient to Satisfy Demand

New York, July 7.—Italy, economically and politically, continues to reflect the strain of its effort to feed and to find employment for a rapidly increasing population, according to a recent credit position study of the country issued by the Institute of International Finance, which points to the Italian population problem as one of the most serious difficulties confronting the kingdom. The institute, a fact-finding body organized to study foreign credit conditions, is conducted by the Investment Bankers' Association of America in co-operation with New York University.

The Italian Government, the institute reports, has attempted to cope with this acute situation chiefly by improving agricultural methods and by encouraging further industrialization. The government's agricultural programme, designed to eventually bring under cultivation every acre of potentially arable land, includes a whole series of technical, educational and financial measures. It is expected that the completion of the plan will require fourteen years, and that the financial obligations incurred will be liquidated in thirty years. Although this effort has resulted in increased production, the country's agricultural output is not yet sufficient to supply the domestic demand, and Italy's foreign-trade balance in foodstuffs continues to show a large deficit.

Italy's effort to speed up the country's industrialization in order to support the increasing population has been greatly facilitated by an abundance of skilled labor, by high tariffs, the rapid development of hydro-electric power, and up to several years ago by the low value of the lira. Aided by these factors the country has been able to overcome to a considerable extent the difficulties caused by the lack of raw materials, notably coal and iron. In 1929 more than 65 per cent of Italy's total exports consisted of manufactured goods, as contrasted with an average of about 50 per cent in the years immediately preceding the war. From the standpoint of the value of foreign trade the textile industry is the most important in Italy.

Stores and Poolroom Destroyed By Fire

Windsor, B.C., July 8.—Two stores and a community poolroom on the main street of Canal Flats burned to the ground yesterday. The loss is put at $10,000.

EVERYBODY SEES

the ravages of the Forest Fire, but not everybody realizes that seventy per cent of our fires in 1929 were preventable; in other words, they were due simply to carelessness. Pressure of public opinion has gone far to eliminate carelessness in other directions, but carelessness with fire is still amazingly prevalent.

COLLECTIONS
UP SLIGHTLY
IN ESQUIMALTGeneral Levy Two Per Cent
Down, But Other Rates Are Higher Than in 1929

Collection of general taxes in Esquimalt to date is two per cent below the figure for the corresponding period, last year. But an increase in the collection of sewer rates and rentals, arrears and delinquents, coupled with the firm assurance of a considerable levy later in the year, promises to bring far more money to the coffers of the municipality than was collected in 1929.

Figures for the different sections were presented to the Esquimalt council at its meeting yesterday evening. In the general division, 81.3 per cent has been collected against 83 per cent last year. Sewer rates and rentals have risen from 79 per cent to 84.5 per cent and arrears have been paid to the extent of 23.95 per cent against 16.87 in 1929. A four per cent increase has also been achieved in the delinquent division.

At present the total collections equal those of last year. With the assurance of payment of another large sum they will far exceed those of the previous year.

TO RECONSTRUCTION ESQUIMALT ROAD

During the meeting yesterday evening the council undertook to re-surface Esquimalt Road from Head Street to the city limits, at the cost of the British Columbia Electric Railway Company. The transportation concern has recently completed repairs to the car tracks on the highway and will pay the municipality to put the road back in its original condition.

Arrangements were also made to line the basement vault at the municipal hall, with tarring bit brick in order to prevent the districts documents from suffering from moisture.

Although the majority of the members of the council favored making a donation to the J.S.A.A. the body found itself unable to do so when a letter from Municipal Solicitor G. H. Sedger stated that under the Municipal Act such a grant would be unlawful.

The first Walla Walla onions of the 1929 season are experiencing a brisk demand. Another carload of canteloupes arrived from Imperial Valley yesterday. Only one more carload will be shipped this year. There are still a few old potatoes on the local market. Loganberries are cheaper at $2.40 a box. They are moving fast.

Author of Fables Was Interested in Animals

"Jean Jeani" Jean de la Fontaine's father called anxiously, and his voice rang through the woods. He had taken his son with him while he went to the forest on business, to see some woodmen who lived in a hut far in the interior. Now the boy was lost.

He started back over the paths by which he had come, looking anxiously into the dark woods at each side. He at last almost stumbled over his son, who was lying in the path, flat on his stomach, watching intently a hole in the ground nearby.

"Jean! I've been searching for you for nearly an hour!"

"I've been right here," said Jean. "I saw a little mole push his nose out of the hole and I've been waiting to see if he would come out again."

"An hour?"

"Yes," said Jean. "And now he'll be frightened and won't come at all."

Jean loved to study the little creatures of the woods. When he grew up he wrote fables about them, such as the story of the busy ant and the grasshopper that danced all summer.

He was born in France 300 years ago to-day.

PRAIRIE CROPS
GET GOOD RAINS

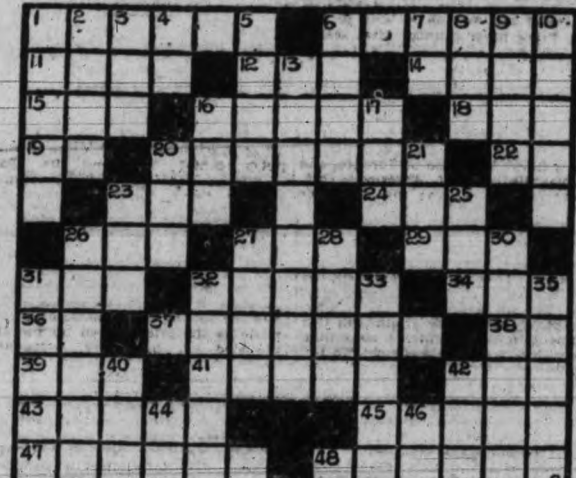

Good rains were general throughout practically all the crop districts of Western Canada during the last week. Sufficient moisture was received to carry all crops over for the next two or three weeks, but warmer weather would be welcomed in several districts, according to the weekly reports of the Department of Agriculture, Canadian National Railways, issued to-day.

In Manitoba conditions have been most favorable. All grains are reported in good shape, with wheat heading out, and barley eight to ten inches high and pastures generally excellent.

Practically no serious damage is reported from any source. In the Neepawa subdivision, crops which were hauled ten days ago have, with the exception of the rye, then heading out, almost wholly recovered. In the Roseburn subdivision, fall rye is all headed out and around two and one-half feet high, with a very good color. On the whole, Manitoba farmers are quite optimistic and report prospects as good.

Heavy rains have been general throughout Saskatchewan during the week, which have helped but all crops very considerably. Fields are in good condition where they have not been previously damaged by high winds and drifting. Wheat is practically all in shot blade with a good deal headed out. Rye cutting should start in from ten days to three weeks throughout the province. In the Prince Albert subdivision, generous rains have assured an ample supply of moisture, and further precipitation is not required for

Man Charged
With Damaging
Things In Jail

Because he did not like the idea of being confined in the city jail Vernon H. Meadows is alleged to have smashed a number of windows and partially destroyed his blankets, according to an information laid against the man in the City Police Court this morning.

Meadows was arrested in the first place on a charge of creating a disturbance by shouting. When arraigned in court yesterday he continued to talk quite fluently and was remanded until to-day. This morning he again called down the judgment of all and sundry in regard to his innocence and asked for bail, which was granted in the sum of $50 cash. He had to face a second charge, however, of wilfully damaging city property to the extent of $50.

He was remanded for hearing.

Mrs. Clancy—Faith now, and why don't you get in out of the windy and let your pet monkey sit there awhile? The neighbors would get a good rest from your ugly cold face.

Clancy—It was this morning I did just that. And a policeman came along and when he saw the monkey, remarked: "Why, Mrs. Clancy, when did you move downstairs?"—Tit-Bits.

ANNUAL RIFLE MEET AT HEALS OPENS TO-DAY

Over 100 British Columbia Riflemen Taking Part in B.C.R.A. Competition

Team For Dominion Meet at Ottawa Will Be Selected Following Local Event

By Times Special Representative
Heals Range, July 8.—Under ideal weather conditions, and amid picturesque surroundings, the British Columbia Rifle Association meet at Heals Range got away to a beautiful start promptly at 9 o'clock this morning. One hundred of the best shots in the Province are assembled here, all eager to share in the money prizes, which total around $2,000. Aside from the cash awards, some very beautiful trophies are up for competition. It must be remembered that some of British Columbia's finest shots are at present competing at Bisley in the Empire meet.

About thirty tents have been erected, and these will house the men during their five-day sojourn here. The tents are equipped with camp beds and mattresses and no effort has been spared in order to assure the rifleman plenty of comfort during the time they are not busy on the range. There appears to be quite a number of new faces at the meet this year, and a few of the old timers have dropped out. To see the young boys trying their luck and skill for the first time makes the success of future rifle contests assured.

This morning was given over to "extra series," which are nothing more than "warming up exercises." However, those entered in the aggregate competition take their highest score five in these series and add it on to the scores they make in the following events. This gives rise to a little competition, even though the series are held for the purpose of tuning up the sights. No one could have wished for a better day for shooting. The sun was shining and visibility was very good. A slight breeze was blowing across the range, but not enough to interfere with the firing.

The first extra series was fired at 300 yards, five rounds per man. Of all ages competing, only one man hit the target for a possible of twenty-five. This single honor went to Sgt. S. Watson, of the Canadian Scottish.

Moving back to the 300-yard range, the second extra series was fired. Here, too, the target was hit by only one man. This single honor went to Sgt. S. Watson, of the Canadian Scottish.

The last extra series was fired at 500 yards, three rounds per man. Here, too, the target was hit by only one man. This single honor went to Sgt. S. Watson, of the Canadian Scottish.

At 11 o'clock, the first real event started, when the men began firing in the Westminster competition, ten rounds per man, at 300 yards. The time of going to press, Major Richardson led the troops, with a good forty-nine. Close behind him came Lieut. Fyvie and Sgt. Watson of the Canadian Scottish.

STOCK AVERAGES UP A FRACTION IN DUL TRADE

Gillette Safety Razor Continues Headlong Tumble to New Lows

Timkin, American Locomotive, Air Reduction and Dupont Also Soft

New York, July 8 (B.C. Bond)—At the close of the market this afternoon the Dow Jones average of thirty industrials stood at 219.08, up 0.75 points for the day; twenty rails at 127.88, up 0.12 points, and for twenty utilities at 79.33, up 0.26 points.

Sales for the day totaled 1,580,509 shares.

Except in a few stocks where the losses were extreme, the list crept up slowly in the late trading on the stock exchange to-day to a fraction above yesterday's close.

LEADERS FIRMER

The rally in U.S. Steel common, which recovered from 153 1/4 to 154 1/4, influenced short covering in other prominent shares, bringing net gains of one to two points in American Can, American Telephone, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, National Electric, Lowe's and Worthington Pump.

NEW LOWS FOR YEAR

On the soft side were American Locomotive, which dropped to a new low at 44, Timken which made a new low at 85 1/4, Air Reduction, which broke five points to a new low at 103 1/4, and Dupont, which slumped from 99 1/4 to a new low at 95 1/4.

Familiar selling tactics were resumed at the opening mainly against a handful of industrial stocks. Volume did not increase, and consensus was that trading operations were almost entirely professional. General Electric seemed to be the industrial leader on which the most pressure was concentrated for a while.

By noon no material progress had been made. The market became absolutely dead, a condition which was succeeded in the afternoon by a small rally during which the active industrial issues gained from one and one-half to two points. This small recovery was held to the close.

Wheat was steadier.

Call money was two and one-half per cent all day.

STEEL INGT PRODUCTION OFF

Largely because of the holiday, steel ingot production for the whole industry dropped to forty-eight per cent with U.S. Steel Corporation at fifty-five per cent.

It was noticeable that when the market started to rally, additional pressure seemed to be placed on individual stocks which had been the object of attack for some time past, to regard the theory buying too small and too hesitant "at the market" to force at this time anything like general shortage.

UNION OIL EARNINGS DROP

Union Oil of California earnings for the last six months dropped to $1.20 a share compared with $1.73 a share in the like period of 1929.

MAY REQUIRE POWER LEVEL

The World-to-day says that despite the preponderance of bearish sentiment, it is difficult to see why the speculative status should be materially altered unless and until it becomes apparent that improvement will have to come from a still lower level of industrial activity and commodity prices.

"It now seems clear that few utilities can expect to be moving ahead as they have in the past year, and there is a tendency to study such issues in the light of their present earnings rather than as in the past to regard them as merely claims upon a future development of almost inconceivable extent."

NEWS AS IN PAST DEPRESSIONS

"General news is no different from the past periods of business dullness and depression," H. P. Bliss to-day says. "Reports of curtailed earnings, uncertain labor situation, smaller public purchasing power, stagnation in a number of industries, are all inevitable accompaniments of a period like this."

"So far as yesterday's market action gives us any clue it is worthy of note that selling thus far has met strong resistance. New low prices have, in line with expectations of the last two weeks, been restricted to isolated cases. There is nothing yet appearing in the entire market picture to disprove the thought that in spite of a high degree of selectivity, the market insofar as the averages are concerned, has reached a bottom. At the same time it is quite important to note that yesterday's closing prices bring the market to a point where firm resistance should be encountered, with to-day's performance practically necessitating the appearance of sufficient rally to take it out of danger. I believe this rally will be forthcoming, and with it come the lifting of stocks away from what is them to be in. Should this not come to be the case, however, think we will be forced to the conclusion that the market lack sufficient strength to make it stand definitely at this point, or at these price levels."

Western Canada Lands Bill Before British Commons

Canadian Press

London, July 8.—The House of Commons today began a second reading of the British North America Bill, which has already passed through all stages of consideration in the House of Lords.

The bill involves an amendment to the British North America Act as a consequence of the agreements concluded by the Dominion Government and the Government of the Province of British Columbia and Alberta for the return to those three provinces of their natural resources. It includes also an agreement for the return to British Columbia of lands in the Peace River Block and the Railway Belt.

The British Government is hastening passage of the bill in view of the celebration on July 15 of the sixtieth anniversary of Manitoba's entry into Confederation.

It is stated that many ladies invited to royal banquets for the first time have been surprised after when Her Majesty pressed them to have a cigarette with her.

London cronies say the Queen has a beautiful smoking set with lighters placed by her chair after she retires from the dining-room with women guests.

UNEMPLOYMENT DIFFERENCE IS THROSHED OUT

Dissatisfied Labor Element Hears MacDonald Explain Proposed Action

British Government Will Study Statistics For Different Industries

London, July 8.—The dissatisfaction of a certain section of the Labor Party with the manner in which the MacDonald Government is dealing with unemployment, was thrashed out at a meeting of the Parliamentary Labor Party to-day. After Premier Ramsay MacDonald and Right Hon. Vernon Harcourt, Lord Privy Seal, had addressed the meeting, the meeting adjourned for ten days.

The Prime Minister stressed the need for loyalty and the presentation of a united front to the party's opponents.

Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Harcourt explained the unemployment problem would be tackled on new lines. Each industry in each section would be examined separately with a view to discovering how many were unemployed in each trade and how many employed were under sixteen or over sixty-five years of age, the Prime Minister said.

REMOVING FORMALITIES.

London, July 8.—The House of Commons has discovered another of the many steps the MacDonald Government has taken in an effort to reduce unemployment. It consists of removing many of the formalities which must be complied with by municipalities before they may undertake public works.

These are eliminated by the Public Works Facilities bill, introduced in Parliament last night and published to-day.

With the object of expediting public works which will contribute to the relief of unemployment, the bill provides local authorities may submit draft proposals to the ministry in a draft order which can be submitted along with any objections to a joint committee of both Houses. This committee will decide whether further inquiry is necessary. Formerly local authorities had to push a private bill through Parliament.

It is proposed the measure continue in force until the end of 1933.

NOMINATIONS NEXT MONDAY IN SOME AREAS

Ottawa, July 8.—In sixty-nine constituencies out of the 84 in Canada, official nominations for the House of Commons will be held next Monday.

In the remainder nomination day for the coming general election will be held on July 15.

The following are the British Columbia constituencies in which nominations will be held next Monday: Cariboo, Comox-Alberni, Kootenay, Ross, Kootenay-West, Yale and Yukon Territory.

WINDS DOWN

Communication lines at Brandon, Man., still were in a disrupted state to-day, and the extent of damage in that area was difficult to compile owing to lack of reports.

The storm struck the area about 1:30 o'clock this morning with a fury unprecedented this season. Close to 150 poles carrying telegraph and telephone lines were uprooted between Kenney and Brandon by force of the wind which accompanied the hail.

The Kenney district received the brunt of the blow and crop damage there was known to be heavy, but the extent of the damage could not be definitely fixed on the basis of the meagre advice which trickled through.

PRICES GO UP

Winnipeg, July 8.—Hail that beat down growing crops across the prairie put short interest on the defensive in the wheat market here and brought wheat values to a higher level to-day.

Gains of 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cents a bushel in all grades, which were attributed directly to reports of extensive damage by hail over a considerable strip of territory, together with extremely high temperatures that promised no more rain.

Two of the three months, however, were still below the dollar line at finish of trading, December closing at $1.01 1/4, July and October were 1 1/4 cents.

The grain market was attributed to the Winnipeg pit kept the market rapidly going higher, observers believed.

PAPER STATE QUEEN ENJOYS CIGARETTES

London, July 8.—The fierce light which beats about the throne has revealed Queen Mary as a "regular cigarette smoker," according to several London newspapers.

The London Evening Standard says: "The news is not at all startling. Long before smoking had ceased to be fashionable, the Queen had been seen smoking a cigarette after dinner, though naturally they would not be seen smoking on formal occasions, and it will be remembered that cigarette cases which appeared among Princess Mary's wedding presents were not sent by complete strangers."

It is stated many ladies invited to royal banquets for the first time have been surprised after when Her Majesty pressed them to have a cigarette with her.

London cronies say the Queen has a beautiful smoking set with lighters placed by her chair after she retires from the dining-room with women guests.

Sledge Across Knuckles Puts Yegg to Flight

Seattle, July 8.—A crackman fled from the Ever-Ready-Lunch Room here yesterday morning after Noah James, night cook, had clipped the man's knuckles with a sledge while helping him to attempt to open the safe.

James, who was locked in the ice box before the man departed, said he was forced at the point of a gun to swing the hammer while the man held the chisel.

After he had struck the man's knuckles, James said, the robber asked him for his money.

"I didn't take it when I told him I needed my 98 for myself," James told police.

KING OPENS INDIA HOUSE IN LONDON

those of the sister nations here in the centre of my capital further symbolizes the unity of the great commonwealth of which she is a part. For a deeper realization of that two-fold unity I most earnestly pray.

"During recent months I have watched with anxious heart the trouble passage of events. Trusting in the Divine guidance, I hope to await the day that shall restore the gift of true understanding and thus unite every peace and contentment to my Indian people."

LEADERS CONGRATULATED

"On the successful issue of your plans I congratulate you, Sir Atal Chandra, and all those who have been associated with you. Foremost among these was Sir Herbert Baker, who has impressed his genius upon so many of the great buildings in the Imperial capital at Delhi. It is most appropriate that he should also be the designer of this India House in London."

"I have now much pleasure in declaring India House open, and I trust it may not only serve the material progress of that country, but by spreading sound knowledge may foster friendship between the peoples of India and Great Britain that wider sympathy for which I have pleaded many years and plead again to-day."

HAIL AND WIND BEAT DOWN MUCH PRAIRIE GRAIN

into Saskatchewan, North and northward of Hays and in the Strand territory, the losses were heavy over a strip of country about six miles wide.

The gale bearing the hailstorm apparently widened after passing over Strand, and took in a greater strip of farm lands on its eastward flight.

Around sulphur Springs as much as half the total acreage was laid low.

GALE SPLIT

The storm played a prank as it passed over the Shearwater district of Alberta. A farmer in the centre of the gale's path reported his lands escaped practically unscathed as the miniature cyclone split into two sections and passed along on its destructive way.

Northward of the storm's path and south of the luck farmer suffered crop damage ranging from fifty per cent to total loss.

Says No Hurry To Buy Stocks

J. G. Kellam, Canadian Coast manager of Logan & Ryan, international New York stockbroker, visited Victoria with his wife and party and toured the island during the holiday week-end.

Mr. Kellam said he believed that in about a year or so from now it would likely be time enough to think of buying stocks for a rise that will hold.

THE PEACOCK'S TAIL

By Mrs. ROMILLY FEDDEN

She returned to her thoughts. Love, if this was that, made her weak. When had she ever dared danger with a fear? To-night she owned to it. Deep down she was afraid, afraid of death, afraid, rather, of missing life. Leslie, and Leslie's love. Now she wished passionately that she had kissed him, had let him kiss her. At least she would have had that. But, then, she could have had that. She recalled the effort with which she had torn herself from his arms. It was the hardest thing she had ever done—much harder than this night's work. To risk her life to save the girl who was no more than a past—hardly more.

And after to-night? A delicious languor stole over her. Should she leave it all to him—when she got back? Once more the old rebellious spirit surged up. Loss her liberty? Be his? Belong to him? Never! Free she would live and free she would die, but marry him or any other man—no. Yet while she said these words aloud to herself, she knew that deeper than anything was the certainty that she would be whatever Leslie Stewart asked her to be. She looked about her. It was still a long way to the valley where the hills and the troops marched by. Abdullah would be waiting there with Scimitar, as she had hidden him. She would mount and be off down the long road to Fez. Filled with that dramatic sense which stage-sets her every action, she saw herself speeding through the night, saw the tired columns overtaken, saw Tino himself turn to meet her, gave her message, even started other messengers onward to recall still farther-tramping battalions, turned with the regiment, and by a forced march was back before the walls of El Poulkara. Would Leslie understand?

Then, suddenly, she thought of her father. Was Leslie like him, or was it only the likeness of race? Both so tall and so big, with the cool air of command that she liked. She smiled in the darkness. How her father had spoiled her. She remembered her birthdays, each marked by some wonderful surprise up to this very last year, when he had led her out into the palace courtyard to find Scimitar with the gorgeous saddle of red Morocco and the jewelled bridle. She had ridden like a princess at his side. A that and had dragged the rebellious senior back to Morocco, filled with the spirit of Spanish propaganda, which had been so cleverly instilled in the barracks of the capital. Well, she would finish it up, round it off with to-night's ride, and then be free—to be anything—even English if she chose.

She was nearing the valley. Her whistle rang out softly clear and true, and she answered off to the right and ahead. In a moment Abdullah came into the dim road before her leading the horse. She greeted him gravely. She drew from her finger the ring of silver set with emeralds.

With the ring she gave the man the password for the Spanish sentries and a message for D'Astorga, which she knew that Abdullah would deliver safely within the walls of El Poulkara.

Then while he knelt to hold her stirrup, she vaulted into the saddle, and in her white hawk, like a young hawk, was off down the road to Fez.

CHAPTER XXVII

The history of that night was never written. You saw no account of it in the papers. They were too full of more important matters, more important matters. What was a corner of Spanish Morocco while the H.E.'s thundered in Flanders and every hour's dispatches brought further dismay to the closed rooms in Whitehall? One of two old men in the Foreign Office turning up Fitzgerald's letters in the files may have wondered what was happening. Lord Balfour may have given it as a quick thought. His only son was lying wounded in France. Yet in El Poulkara, the fate of France in Morocco, of Spain in Morocco, hung in the balance. Perhaps the only two who fully realized it were the girl speeding south and Fitzgerald, wrapped in his cloak, moving through the streets from point to point. Concha Nicholson was risking her life for the cause of Spain. Fitzgerald held his light by its loss he could win. And at Spanish Headquarters General Miguel sat in his bedroom, rage alone stiffening him from a total collapse. The nominee of a corrupt autocracy faced by the unexpected, he was futile. He shouted orders which he as quickly countered. His aides were powerless. He broke off from the question of the moment to curse the political influence which had thrust him into the saddle. He was indifferent to the opinion of those about him, he cynically exposed his own soul, in all its mean ambition and sordid greed.

"They told me that El Poulkara was safe—that I should see no fighting. I didn't come to fight. I am not a fighting man. Do I look like a fighting man? It's all the fault of my nephew, the Chancellor. He sent me here. I'll give him a piece of my mind. A nice post this. My own sister's son!"

D'Astorga stood by the window looking down into the lighted barracks yard, trying to shut out the sound of the man's words. He was sick at heart. Brave and upright, he had no sympathy with the Moroccan campaign. But he was there, like many another, to do his duty.

BEDTIME STORY

Uncle Wiggily's Riddle

(Copyright, 1930.)

By HOWARD E. GARIS

When it rained, so his little bunny boys and girls could not go out to play, Uncle Wiggily asked them a riddle to amuse them. The riddle was this:

"What animal is it that has only one paw, growing out of its stomach and who goes around carrying his house on his back?"

Neither Baby Buntz, Jingle, nor Buster could guess Uncle Wiggily's riddle, and he was going to tell them. But they begged him to give them another chance. So now we see the little rabbit children in the bungalow, waiting to go out of doors and play. For the rain had stopped in the night and the sun was shining.

"But we haven't guessed the riddle yet!" said Baby Buntz who was a cute little orphan rabbit living with Uncle Wiggily. "It doesn't seem as if there could be any animal with only one foot."

"Yet there must be," said Buster. "For Daddicus called him 'Mr. One Paw' and he said he's showing him to us if we couldn't guess."

Uncle Wiggily came sliding down the bannister railing instead of hopping along the stairs. Seeing the bunnies gathered around the door he called to them, asking:

"Have you guessed the answer to my riddle about Mr. One Paw?"

"No, Uncle Wig," answered Buntz with a little hiss. "We can't think of the answer."

"But you said you'd take us, out and show us," said Jingle.

"So I will!" promised Uncle Wiggily. "We ought to find Mr. One Paw easily this morning. He never goes out in the rain. 'Does he like rain?' asked Jingle.

"Mr. One Paw is often seen walking with his house on his back after a rain," said Mr. Longears with a smile.

"Oh, goodie!" cried Tootle, one of the newest little rabbits in the bungalow. "I never would have guessed such a funny animal with only one paw that grows out of his stomach."

"And I want to see him jump along with his house on his back," cried Buntz. "Let's go look for him now."

"Come on then, all of you!" invited Uncle Wiggily, and with jolly shouts and laughter, the bonny rabbit children hopped out of the hollow stump bungalow, with Uncle Wiggily following after like Mary's little lamb.

"Where is Mr. One Paw? Where is Mr. One Paw?" sang the bunnies, as they hopped over the grass. They could not imagine how any animal could have but one paw, or foot. All of a sudden Uncle Wiggily pointed to something on the ground and cried:

"There he is! That's Mr. One Paw!"

The bunny children looked and what do you suppose they saw as the answer to Uncle Wiggily's riddle? Well, some of you may have guessed since the story of last night. Yes, it was a snail, who was partly out of his shell house he carried on his back.

"Well, I know, I know," said Mr. One Paw as he crawled along. "I have guessed since the story of last night. Yes, it was a snail, who was partly out of his shell house he carried on his back."

"But I don't see his one paw," said Baby Buntz. "Does it grow out of his stomach, Uncle Wig? And maybe, he has more than one paw, for he has four legs. He is crawling along just as if he had four legs."

"May I show my bunnies that you have only one foot, Mr. Snail?" asked Uncle Wiggily, roly-poly.

"Surely," answered Senior Snail, graciously waving the two things, like hands, growing on top of his head. Uncle Wiggily found the first place of glass and, having let Mr. Snail crawl on this glass the rabbit gentleman lifted it up so the bunnies could look beneath it. Mr. Snail was just under the underside of Mr. Snail, and truly they saw, through the glass, something like a foot growing right out of the middle of his stomach. And, too, as Mr. Snail crawled over the glass, they could see how he managed to get along on his one paw, without ever lifting it off the glass. It was the same when he was on the ground.

Mr. Snail first raised the back end, or heel of his one paw up a wee bit from the glass and pushed it ahead, and then he raised the front part or toes, of his foot and pushed that ahead. So he moved a tiny distance which was enough for any snail. If you will put your hand flat down on the table, then raise your wrist until your hand is humped up and then after putting your wrist down, if you will push your fingers ahead without moving your wrist and keep on doing this, you will see how Mr. Snail can walk on only one leg.

"That was a jolly good riddle, Uncle Wig!" laughed Baby Buntz as she and the others watched Mr. Snail hitching himself along on the glass with his one stomach paw. If the boy should befriend the puppy dog two tin horns so he can blow himself up in the air, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's wonderful ride.

Our Men Are Installing the Dials on the telephones

Getting ready for the New Telephone System

LATE this year the dial telephone system will come into use in Victoria.

In preparation for this step, a special crew of installers is at work, placing the dials on the telephones which are now in service. The installation of a dial requires only a few minutes, but as there are about 17,000 instruments to be dealt with, the whole job will cover a period of some weeks.

Instructors will visit our Victoria subscribers later on to explain the operation of the dial telephones. We feel sure you will find the new system simple and easy to use.

I DON'T HAVE TO TAKE LAXATIVES OF ANY KIND NOW

For Ten Years Before I Took Sargon I Had to Take Laxatives Almost Daily

From all sections where Sargon is available, come floods of glowing letters telling of the almost unbelievable results obtained from the use of this scientific formula.

Why? Because Stealcote is a rubber base enamel. It flows itself on without a brush mark, lap or streak, leaving a smooth, brilliant finish that looks and lasts like baked enamel.

You can use Stealcote right over old lacquer, paint or any crack. Being elastic, it won't crack, chip or peel, and stays glistening new months after ordinary finishes are weather-beaten.

Why drive a shabby car when you can paint your car like new so easily?

Warnings: Don't buy too much. Stealcote goes twice as far as any other kind of paint. Buy only a pint for small car or quart for large. Sold by hardware, paint and auto accessory stores.

Is the Modern Wife a Better Sport Than Her Mother and Grandmother?—Why the Caveman Makes a Good Husband for One Type of Girl

DEAR MISS DIX—Don't you think that there is less grumbling and whining among the married women of the younger generation than there was of the old? Our grandmothers and mothers used to enjoy getting together to discuss men and their selfishness. Wherever women gathered together you could hear them sigh and moan over the sacrifices they were forced to make. The modern girl takes things as they come and doesn't expect matrimony to be a bed of roses. I knew when I married that I would have some hard knocks along with the good things, because that is life.

I have been married now eight years. We haven't much money and I have to work hard, but it never occurs to me to be dissatisfied or to think that marriage isn't worth while. And I think that is the attitude of most young women of to-day who love their husbands and who are loved by their husbands. DONNA.

ANSWER—I think you are right, Donna, and that whatever else the modern woman may be or may not be, she is a better sport than the woman of the past was.

I have observed that it is the middle-aged wives who are nearly always the whiners, who are grumbling because their husbands can't give them as many luxuries as rich women have or who are always lamenting over their husbands' philandering or drinking. The young wives don't take it out in tears and beating upon their breasts. They do something about it.

Before the modern girl marries she has figured out her budget on her prospective husband's income and she makes up her mind either to live on it or to supplement it by her own earnings instead of howling for cake when she married on a bread-and-butter basis. Likewise, if she doesn't approve of her husband's conduct, she gets up and leaves him instead of going through life as a domestic martyr and calling for the sympathy of the public. And she laughs off a lot of her husband's faults instead of having hysterics over them as the women of the past did.

To my mind the greatest progress women have made is in being happy and making the best of life, instead of being woebeings and making a tragedy of life as their foremothers did. For there is no denying that the women of the past made a cult of sorrow and that they nursed their griefs and made the most of every unpleasantness that they could.

In fact, it was not considered good form for a woman really to enjoy herself. It was actually esteemed vulgar for her to laugh. The most she could do and be really elegant was to smile, and a perfect lady was supposed to wear an air of gentle melancholy.

I can well recall a group of sombre ladies, dressed from head to foot in crepe, and who could not have gone any deeper into mourning unless they had subsisted on black tea, who used to come and spend the day with my grandmother every now and then to hold a tearfest. They would have a perfectly grand time recounting all the sorrows of their lifetime to each other and they were held in high regard in the community because they had never "gotten over" some grief or disappointment that had happened to them thirty or forty years ago.

There are no such morbid, hysterical women among the modern generation. No young woman of to-day comes to weep on your breast and tell you her troubles. She bucks up and bears them herself and turns a smiling face to the world. We don't think that a woman shows nobility of soul by brooding year after year over a past wrong and sorrow. We think she is feeble-minded or neurotic and that she should get out and do something for somebody else that would make her forget her own selfish feelings.

Why, it is almost as unusual to see a woman weep now as it is to see a man, and every year women are more and more emancipating themselves from the tyranny of mourning garments. They don't feel that there is any necessity of their bereavement to the world nor of expressing other people with the visible emblem of death.

Nor do you hear women complaining so much about their husbands as they used to. That has also ceased to be a popular form of indoor feminine sport. The modern wife knows that she doesn't have to stand a bad husband unless she wants to and that if she does the general public expects her to have the decency not to befoul the bread she eats.

Perhaps the modern woman is shy on some of the virtues that her grandmother had, but she is a lot more pleasant companion to live with. DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR MISS DIX—Are all girls crazy? I am twenty-eight and am beginning to think so. My sister of nineteen has a dozen boys trailing her and she has fallen in love with a man who, she says, is wonderful because he is so "strong and manly." Her hair was long and he was just like a giant, told her not to bob it. She, being a girl and contrary, had to cut it. When he saw her short hair and heard her flippant remarks about it, he turned her across his knee and proceeded to wallop her good. I heard her crying and came to put him out and started to put him out by my darling sister to mind my own business. Did you ever hear of such a fool girl? For a man who will spank his fiancée will certainly flog his wife. How can a girl suffer herself to be humiliated by being struck by a man? And how can I save this poor, silly sister of mine from marrying a man who will be a wife-beater? Shall I leave her to her fate? Maybe a few spanks will do her good. BEWILDERED BROTHER.

ANSWER—Probably you are right and what your sister does need is the spanking that her mother failed to give her at the proper time of life. I think there are a lot of spoiled young girls who have never had any one to control them, who feel the need of having a heavy hand over them and who would really like to have somebody exercise authority over them and make them behave.

Besides that, there is no denying that there are plenty of women who are still cave women at heart and to whom nothing appeals so much as brutality. They would like to be wooed with a club and to be dragged off by the hair of their heads to the altar and to live in trembling fear of their captors. Gentleness and kindness is wasted on this type of woman. The only thing she responds to is force. She likes to be ordered about and forbidden to do this and commanded to do that and not to know that her soul is her own. DOROTHY DIX.

One of the amusing things that settlement workers find is the difficulty of getting the women whose husbands beat them up to leave them. One would think that they would be only too eager to get away from the cruel brutes who so mistreat them, but such is not the case. They literally kiss the hand that smites them and lie about their black eyes and stick to their masters as faithfully as dogs. It is the women who are married to gentlemen who would never hit their hands to a woman save in kindness who get divorces, not the wives of wife-beaters. So, perhaps, your sister will be happy with her caveman after all. DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I have a daughter fifteen years old who wants to work during vacation. Her father and I don't like the idea, as it is not necessary. What should we do about it? MRS. FRED H. S.

ANSWER—Your daughter probably has a lot of energy and initiative and she feels that she would be bored sitting around home with nothing to do. Why not send her off to a girls' camp? That would give her chance and plenty of outdoor activities and a new point of view on many subjects.

But if she is very anxious to go to work, I see no reason why she should not do so. (Copyright by Public Ledger).

Adventure Party Here On Big Diesel Yacht

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Boynton and C. Enholm of San Diego
Had Rough Trip Up Coast

Will Cruise Alaska This Summer and Hope to Make the Panama Canal Next Winter

Alaska-bound after an open Pacific Ocean trip up the coast from San Diego, the forty-five foot Diesel motor yacht The Chalice, of the southern California port, arrived in Victoria late yesterday afternoon with her owners, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Boynton and a guest, Christopher Enholm aboard. They will remain here until tomorrow morning when they will set out for Alaska, of which they have heard so much in the south. They intend to spend about six weeks cruising northern waters and hope to get favorable winds on the return south to San Diego.

TAKES TURN AT WHEEL

The yachting party travels only in the day-time and Mrs. Boynton takes her turn at the wheel relieving her husband and their guest. She also does the cooking and keeps the cabins neat and trim while the engine room after the exterior and the engine-room. There are two cabins on the ship, one for the owner and the other for the guest, and both are tastefully decorated with gay cushions, chintz-covered chairs and colorful hangings on the walls. The ship is also equipped with a radio, refrigerator and other modern conveniences, and carries a well-filled book case, and other accessories to while away the time while at sea. There is also a deck running right along the ship and it is a good-sized space, covered in with canvas.

Mr. and Mrs. Boynton have been to Vancouver Island before and think it is a wonderful place to spend a holiday. Both are enthusiastic anglers and they have spent several days at Campbell River and other famous fishing grounds. They have also motored up and down the Island and believe the highways among the finest and most picturesque on the continent. The sheltered waters around Victoria for yachting have no equal on the coast and if San Diego only had the same places to cruise in, everything in the south would be perfect.

AMBITIOUS TRIP

The party aboard The Chalice expects to return to San Diego about the middle of September. Just where they will go has not yet been decided. The Gulf of California and the old-world Mexican ports along the coast are a certain charm for them, while they might even attempt to get as far south as the Panama Canal.

GETS PROMOTION

"My father fully believed that when he passed over we would continue to keep in touch with us. All his family believe so, too."

While funeral plans proceeded, and the widow and sons and daughter awaited words of solution of the great mystery, the widow was comforted that the last words of the man to whom death came at the age of seventy-one as a consequence of heart disease, were to her. They were delivered shortly before he closed his eyes holding her hand at his home here. They were:

A charming and vivacious woman, Mrs. Boynton is an expert sports-woman and fishes and hunts as well as her husband. There are many different kinds of guns aboard and Mrs. Boynton has her favorites and handles them like a veteran. She is very proud of a set of silver spoons she won in San Diego for shooting, she said today, and treasures them greatly. She intends to get in a good deal of fishing on the forthcoming trip in the north and, perchance, a little hunting if they are in time for any season.

Several passengers from San Francisco and Los Angeles who have been holidaying in Victoria boarded the liner here this afternoon.
